Police have released CCTV images and are appealing for public assistance as investigations continue into the theft of 'smart' watches from retail stores.

Officers from Lake Macquarie Police District launched an investigation after three males took 12 'smart' watches from a store at a Charlestown shopping centre on Wednesday 18 September 2019.

Officers from Kuring Gai Police Area Command were notified of a second incident on Wednesday 2 October 2019, after 17 watches were stolen from a store at a Hornsby shopping centre.

Investigators have been told; however, that the items are only display models with very limited functionality despite appearing identical.

They are warning members of the public – who may be offered the watches for sale – to exercise caution and ensure they ask for proof-of-purchase before proceeding with a transaction, online or otherwise.

Initial inquiries suggest the incidents are linked and investigators are now releasing CCTV images of three males who may be able to assist with their investigation.

The first male is described as being Caucasian appearance, about 18-20 years old, of a medium build, and with a dark beard and moustache.

He is depicted wearing a white t-shirt, black hooded jacket, cream coloured pants, and an orange cap.

The second male is described as being Caucasian appearance, about 18-20 years old, of a medium build, and with short brown hair.

He is depicted wearing a black hooded jumper, black pants, and is seen carrying a black backpack.

The third male is described as being Caucasian appearance, 15-17 years old, of a slim build, and with short dark hair.

He is depicted wearing a black hooded jumper, and black pants with white stripes down each leg.

Anyone with information about this incident is urged to contact Crime Stoppers: 1800 333 000 or check here. Information is treated in strict confidence. The public is reminded not to report crime via NSW Police social media pages.

14 October, from roadsafety.transport.nsw.gov.au: Just a reminder, school zones are in operation around schools. Slow down for children 40km/h school zones help protect children on their way to and from schools at the times and places where they are often in high numbers. This lower speed limit reduces the risk and potential severity of a crash. School zone signs, dragon's teeth road markings and flashing lights improve the visibility of school zones.

Queensland Highway Patrol were in pursuit of a vehicle which had been identified as being a vehicle leaving the scene of a serious offence.

The vehicle was heading south and would soon be crossing the NSW border.

As the escaping vehicle crossed over the border and into New south Wales, the Highway Patrol Officer terminated the pursuit.

Dumbfounded, his offsider, asked, "Why did you stop Sergeant? He was just there, right in front of us".

The Sergeant replied, "Well you see Constable, he's in NSW now and they're an hour ahead of us so there's no way we would ever catch him".

Cop Humour Australia

These are my boots. Since I graduated from the police academy, I have worn them for every shift, and they have seen everything I have seen, and worse.

They've trod in vomit and wee, dog poo, horse poo, cow poo and human poo.

They've trod in the blood of the dead, the dying and the seriously injured.

They've protected me from the broken glass, oil and jagged metal of shattered vehicles.

They've been with me when I've saved lives, and when I've had to let people go... sometimes for the greater good of others that needed saving.

They've seen the very best of humanity, but they've also seen the very worst.

They've seen the moments of life changing sadness of those left behind; wives and husbands, sons and daughters, mothers and fathers... some of them to children.

If my boots could talk, they could tell stories that would make your toes curl.

If they had a conscience, you would sometimes hear them cry at night trying to outrun the sadness they have seen.

Boots don't talk, but sometimes those who wear them should.

It's okay to not be okay.

to me

Hello,

Well let me just jump right into it. I just got divorced and the Toyota was awarded to me in our divorce. I have a low price ($4,000) because I want to sell it before October 14th ideally. I have a deployment coming up and would prefer to have my mother who is taking care of my children, have the cash instead.

Now, a few words about This 2014 Toyota Corolla Hatchback is an Automatic petrol and it's had one owner since new. If you decide to buy it, you'll receive all the papers, owner manual, keys, a buy-sell contract already signed by me and the clear title. Rego expiry April 2020.

Hi again Josh, as I've told you in my email, I'm in the Air Force with my medical team so I'll be on a military base. We are training, getting ready to go to a new country. Before leaving I had prearranged this with eBay I refuse to have them to take care of the whole selling process as I cannot leave the military base. The delivery process will be managed by me. I think I can have it there at your home address within 1-2 working days. You will have 5 days to test and inspect the Toyota prior to making any purchase. During that 5 days testing period I will not be getting any money. Only when you give the confirmation to eBay that you are satisfied by the Toyota and want to keep it, they will release the funds to me, otherwise, they will refund you the full amount of money without any question, and you can ship the Toyota back on my expense. I need to know if you are interested so I can ask eBay to send you
